

My Dear Digital Buddy, BITCOIN

All wash apartments,

Dubai

"I hope you are done dumping. Since I entered a few trades near their highs, and that's what worries me. I can't really be in profit unless you start forming new uptrends."

My digital friend "Some call you digital gold; I call you my emotional and Volatility Index. Every candle you print is a jump-scare." You've liquidated my sleep schedule more times than any exchange could ever liquidate my longs. You move like a ninja stealth rally at 3AM, dump at 4:15, and sideways until everyone loses hope. You are the only asset that can break resistance, support, and my mental stability in the same 4-hour candle. You've taught me more about psychology, and patience than any degree on earth. Everytime you form a bearish pattern, you rug my hopes, and everytime you pump, you make me believe you're finally going to be the most expensive virtual entity that can grow my portfolio exponentially. But you know it's almost impossible for me to forget the early morning bloodbath in cryptomarket on 10th Oct 2025 that was undoubtedly most brutal liquidation and my portfolio is still down 60 percent, and if holding was an Olympic Sport, I'd have more medals than Satoshi has wallets. But still you know what gives me hope, so listen, Writing from the crypto-friendly hub, Dubai, I'm thrilled to share that my blockchain tutor told me about Dubai's latest milestone, to integrate crypto into payments and have completed their first-ever cross-border transaction with China. If anything proves your bright future, it's this.

Growing up in a crypto-crazy family. I was raised on flashing red and green candles long before I understood them. Now, every blockchain event inspires me, seeing teenagers already mastering financial freedom fuels my hope that I'll one day guide the next generation with confidence and vision. Dear BTC, thank you for the Bullruns, the bear markets, and the emotional liquidations in between.

You've taught me more about Fibonacci levels than my maths teacher ever could, mostly because you ignore all of them. Your volatility hits harder than any caffeine shot, you may wreck my charts, confuse my indicators, and liquidate my patience, but somehow, you always leave a small green candle of hope on my screen. Your candles may flicker, but the hope you ignite stays constant like a blockchain that never stops running.

Digitally Yours,
Aleesha Batool, Year 12. A 17 year old crypto trader.
